The F&ES Mentoring Network

At F&ES you have access to an abundance of advising and mentoring resources, here to support you in striving toward your academic, career and life goals.
F&ES Mentoring Network Components

The mentoring network consists of faculty, staff, and peers from the following realms:

Academic Advising: As a form of mentorship, the role of an academic advisor is to provide guidance for your overall program of study in fulfillment of Master’s degree requirements. Importantly, this includes offering advice on the selection of courses that best tailors your professional training at F&ES to your past experience and career aspirations.

Alumni: The Environmental Leadership Mentoring (ELM) program connects students in their final year at F&ES with alumni mentors. AlumniFire is a great way to network, reconnect with classmates, and begin planning for your Reunion Weekend.

Career Development Office (CDO): The F&ES Career Development Office (CDO) is open to F&ES master’s and doctoral students and alumni. At CDO, find opportunities for mentorship opportunities such as individual career advising and peer career advising.

Centers & Programs: As a form of mentorship, Centers & Programs sponsor student internships and projects, coordinate faculty research in areas of common interest, and create symposia, conferences, newsletters and outreach programs.

Learning Community: Identify mentorship within F&ES’ 9 specialized learning communities. The learning communities were created to offer robust, interdisciplinary experiences and networks to deepen understanding and advance impact.

Partners On Prospect (POP): Selecting a Partner is a self-navigated selection of a mentor, with an intended focus on forming positive, organic relationships with students who seek holistic support and guidance. Selecting a Partner can be based on a vast array of factors: Common hometown, philanthropic or social interests, or even a favorite genre of music or film!

Peer Mentorship: In the Peer Mentoring Program, incoming students are matched with rising second-year students who help them with transitioning to life at F&ES.
